

Documents to transfer to Devon Heritage Centre

The following 10 boxes of items have been stored within the library for a number of years. The upcoming library relocation means we no longer have space to store these items, or in many cases the correct conditions to ensure the items are preserved for the future. This is particularly true for the photographs, early paper documents and engravings and wax seals. Transferring these records to the Devon Heritage Centre (DHC) would ensure they were preserved and made accessible for research. It will also provide more space for the current library and enable us to facilitate better access to the remaining historical items.

A number of records below contain personal information, especially those more recent, and it is likely that the more recent records would be closed for a number of years (DHC will advise on this).

Some records are already housed at the Devon Heritage Centre in Exeter (listed below) and I would like PCC approval to transfer these items into the same collection. We will be able to borrow back any items for display if we so wish on a temporary loan.
